Henna Aukia is a versatile and business-oriented lawyer with extensive experience at the intersection of technology, regulation, and innovation.

Her core strengths lie in the fields of life sciences and healthcare, with a particular focus on pharmaceuticals and health technologies, as well as in intellectual property and marketing.

Henna Aukia advises clients throughout the lifecycle of innovations, from development and regulatory strategy to commercialisation and enforcement, and supports them in navigating sector-specific regulation and legal risks. Her work also frequently involves litigation and dispute resolution, particularly where complex legal questions intersect with strategic business interests. Furthermore, she supports clients in data- and technology-intensive transactions.

Henna Aukia's areas of special expertise are reflected in her day-to-day work, where she advises on complex legal questions related to consumer protection, marketing and communications, AI regulation, data protection, pharmaceutical law, contractual matters, and intellectual property, including trademarks.

She is a sought-after lecturer for clients and Finnish legal training providers within her areas of expertise.

Before joining Dittmar & Indrenius, she gained valuable experience in consumer law and dispute resolution while working at the Finnish Consumer Disputes Board.
